

Providers and Payers Agree: Ensuring vaccine access for patients is a shared responsibility

June 25, 2025

The Common Health Coalition applauds three of its founding members — AHIP, the Alliance of Community Health Plans, and the American Medical Association — for their recent statements affirming their commitment to ensuring access to vaccines for patients ahead of respiratory virus season. Their leadership, and that of their members, sends a clear message: protecting patients from COVID-19, flu, and RSV requires coordination across the entire health ecosystem — from payers and providers to hospitals and pharmacies, vaccine manufacturers, and public health agencies.

Vaccines save lives, but only if people can get them easily and affordably. We stand alongside these organizations and commit to helping advance a system where access to protection is not the exception, but the expectation.

Read the statements here:

- American Medical Association
- Alliance of Community Health Plans
- AHIP